[West Brookfield, (Mass.)] The writer tells of selling books in Rochester, and lecturing in Hopedale, Milford and West Brookfield. Encountered opposition in most of the places she visited. Cannot spend enough time in each town, and thinks that this lack of thoroughness merely prepares the way for the Liberty Party.

«London» The writer regrets that John Q. Adams disclaims being an Abolitionist, but thinks that any act on behalf of the slave will advance the Anti-Slavery cause. Is glad to hear that C. L. Remond is so useful. Asks if J. A. Collins deserted the cause. Says she does not wholly agree with Joseph Sturge. "I am sorry to see in a letter of T. Clarksen's he attributes the idea of setting slaves in West Indies free to William Allen ere the term of Apprenticeship expired." Says that Zachary Macauley was the real emancipator. W. Allen opposed immediate emancipation.

«Dedham, Mass.» The writer tells of his efforts to organize an Anti-Slavery convention in Needham. Reports a conversation with Rev. and Mrs. Kimball and their son. Calms their fears that Garrison meant to overthrow the church and abolish the Sabbath. Describes the farm of one Whitaker. James N. Buffum and «Henry» Clapp told the writer about the Framingham Convention. Writer says he was the first to introduce the Anti-Slavery cause to the town of Needham. Discussed the Liberty Party and the New Organization. A Baptist deacon defended N. Colver, which upset F. Douglass considerably, causing him to admit that there were go[illegible]n in the Liberty Party. The writer tried to correct his [illegible]s on this point. Says that Mary Ann Allen, the sister of Mrs. Spear, is engaged to a Dr. Aldrich. Tells of the activities of J. A. Collins. Mentions

To "My Dear Friend"

‹Edinburgh, Scotland› The writer was surprised and pleased that the aprons and dresses sent to the Anti-Slavery fair sold so well. "...it is quite a common thing here in all the millinery shops to see boys & girls' dresses ready for sale ..." Tells about an Anti-Slavery meeting in Glasgow occasioned by the excitement over the case of John L. Brown. Talks about the churches getting money from American slaveholders. Says that Dr. Burns of Paisley was on the platform at an Emancipation Society meeting at Glasgow last summer and is now collecting money from slaveholders. Condemns the Free Church. "The Emancipation Society of Edinburgh exists only in name, there is too much of the a[illegible]crat prevailing among them for true Abolition ..." Says [illegible] Wigham is a very devoted co-worker. Wants H. C. Wright to return and stir them up. Is sorry that J. A. Collins changed his views.

‹39 Summer Street, Boston› The writer viewed the Temperance procession. Abby Kelley and Mrs. Eliza C. Follen heard William White make a good speech. Following him, N. Colver said that "moral suasion would do nothing for a drunkard." The Hutchinsons sang superbly, and Gov. G. N. Briggs presented a silver cup to (?) Holbrook. The writer relates the proceedings and excitements of the New England Anti-Slavery Convention at Marlboro Chapel, where a vote was taken for Disunion. "‹George› Bradburn was in a quiet way as ugly as Cain." White "tried to clog the wheels in a good humoured way." The Disunion vote was 247 to 23 in fa[illegible] of it. Says a speech by Frederick Douglass was interrup[illegible]y an insolent stranger. In the evening, C. C. Burleigh, [illegible]r the Convention, presented a

Article from The Boston Christian World

«Written from?» This article was copied from the Liberator of June 14,1844 by Rev. May, having been printed first in The Boston Christian World. It sets forth the Preamble and Resolution prepared by the Hon. Stephen C. Phillips and passed by the American Unitarian Association at its Annual Meeting on May 31,1844. The Preamble mentions the Savannah incident. The Resolution definitely puts the Association on record against Slavery.

«Philadelphia» "The Mtgs. of our Ex. Com. since the mtgs. of the Nat. (American Anti-Slavery) Society have been to me most painful ..." Says they lacked buoyancy. "McKim has come out decidedly for the Nat. Society." The Philadelphia Abolitionists want to sever their connection with the Nat. Anti-Slavery Standard. The writer's Society has not yet discussed the subject of agents, and the writer thinks W. Phillips should speak on the matter instead of S. S. Foster and A. Kelley. Mentions Adin Ballou's description of the new Executive Committee. Says the next meeting of her Society is very important since it must consider the subject [illegible] the Society's obligation to circulate the Standard. It [illegible] ten days for a letter from the addressee to reach her. Praises S. H. Gay.

«Darlington, Engl.» Is forwarding "Mrs. W.'s offering to the Fair," without waiting for the box which the writer hopes to send in October. A letter from John Newton of Olney would "fetch a handsome sum from autograph fanciers" in England; hopes it may be successfully sold in America. Mrs. W., being herself a collector, would like to receive autographs from the addressee and from W.L. Garrison. The writer wishes that the Non-Resistant were reestablished, as it is worth all the other peace periodicals that she ever saw.

<34 Eccles St., Dublin> T. Davis of Providence sent the writer T. Parker's Discourses. The writer is a Unitarian but finds among the adherents of this church "as much coldness toward human improvement" as among those of other sects. "Tee-totalism is my favorite hobby." Discusses the question of British trade with Brazil. The writer considers all slave-grown produce as stolen goods. Free trade with Brazil would cause increased exploitation of Africans. "Can there be a doubt that your increase of slavery is owing to our great trade with you?" The writer has appealed to the London Committee "to cry out against a[illegible]lave produce." Contrasts the addressee's Non-Resistance [illegible] his own attitude toward government action. James H. Webb, brother of R. D. Webb, professes to be "more of an absolute Non-resistant than any of us." The Irish people are now almost wholly absorbed in their political troubles. As Daniel O'Connell has a horror of bloodshed, "while he lives, I believe we shall be safe from the calamity of civil war." Irish agitation is a security for the peace of Europe, as England, if invaded, would get no help from Ireland. The teetotal reform "is producing glorious results in this land." Educational conditions are also improving somewhat. The writer is glad that the addressee liked his essay in the Liberty Bell.

To My dear friend" (Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman?) No.51-52

‹Darnley Terrace, Kent› An essay and a letter; the letter occupies the first three pages of No.51. The writer states that she is "too much out of health to write anything," but she is offering a "few reflections." Explains previous statements about American affairs by saying that in England it is found best to unite on an issue, even when differences exist. The writer has a widowed sister in Paris for whom she wishes some interest to arouse her from "useless sorrowing." Expresses sympathy for the addressee. The essay brings out the contrast between the African blacks' treatment of a white stranger and the white man's ensl[illegible]nt of the black man; it also brings out the mission of w[illegible]n doing acts of mercy. Tells of the residences and professions of her three brothers. Having read the National Anti-Slavery Standard with interest, the writer regrets "that there are so many divisions among the Abolitionists." Remarks that Garrison "seems to me to mistake what was the position of the Dissenters before the repeal of the Test & Corporation Act." Explains the true facts. Refers to the persecution of Abolitionists in America and the good fortune of colored people in England.

He then discusses the Anti-Slavery situation in the U.S. at some length, including the past history of the Abolition movement, its internal dissensions, and its conflict with the American churches, who were the chief supports of Slavery, in Rev. May's opinion. He mentions particularly the Calvinist ministers' dislike of W.L.G., and the part played by women in the Abolition movement, referring particularly to Mrs. Lydia M. Child, the Grimkes, and Abbey Kelly. He also speaks of the Liberty party in highly derogatory terms.

The last part of the letter deals with the A-S Fair, Dr. Channing's biography, the Memoirs of Mr. Acton, Dr. S. H. Dickson, and Dr. McCune Smith, a colored minister.

[Dedham, Mass.] The writer sends letters for Garrison and W. Phillips, which the addressee is to read and send on. Not having been able to show "my article (or rather yours & mine) on [John R.] French to Garrison," the writer decided to send him the substance of it and urge him to write a private letter to N. P. Rogers, which he thinks might do good. Regrets that there is to be no Almanach this year. The writer will come in town to attend the Non-Resistance meeting. "Don't let Garrison make me Cor[responding] Sec[retary] for I won't accept it."

To "Dear Friend" [Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman]

[No pl.] Sends a little contribution for the Liberty Bell. If the addressee should reject it, the Child's Friend may receive it. Regrets a discussion with the addressee's sisters as neither side was moved by the other's arguments. The writer has not "that heroic love that you & Eliza (Mrs. Follen) have, of overcoming trial," yet believes that the test of her strength would not prove her deficient. Referring to yesterday's debate, the writer explains that she "quoted W. Channing as opposed to Garrison not in character but in manner." The writer believes that if Garrison "had that refinement which is so striking in W. C[hanning] added to his clearness he could have s[illegible]ven more & wider truths than he has, and yet have been [illegible]d."

Boston. The report begins by describing the action of Congress in regard to the proposed Constitutional amendment basing representation on the free white population of the slave states. Bitter condemnation of U. S. Senators Bates and Choate. Resolutions of Georgia and Virginia attacked. Also the attempt to apply the Gag Rule to the Anti-Slavery members of Congress. One section deals with Texas and its annexation. The Abolitionists are opposed to it. Discusses the political situation. Both party leaders opposed immediate annexation at first. The Report deplores the failure of the North to resist it. Relations with Mexico analysed. Praises England for suppress[illegible] the slave trade. Says the Scoth churches follow the l[illegible]f the American pro-slavery churches. Quotes Dr. Chalme[illegible] of Edinburgh. Praises the Glasgow Female Anti-Slavery Society. Irish Abolitionists

To Whom?

«Weymouth, (Mass.)» The writer begins with a brief account of a meeting of the Boston Female Anti-Slavery Society. Ten dollars was pledged to the Herald of Freedom. "We got ready for a tea fight & Edward Davis & Mary came." Tells about going to hear W. Phillips lecture to the Catholic Aid Society with Davis, who later told of his unhappy experiences with Tom Earle. Abby Kelley is lecturing in Ohio. Says that Judge Jay is in Boston attending a Third Party meeting. Writer reports Jay's views on women as members of Anti-Slavery societies. Rev. Durfee of Dedha[illegible]ted to buy the portrait of Williams, the founder of "[illegible]amstown College." Tells of a heated discussion of D. L. [illegible]ld's financial troubles while «39 Summer St., Boston» This letter bears some resemblance to a journal or diary. Daniel _____? spent Tuesday night here and seemed to enjoy himself. The writer calls him "a most remarkable creature." S. May decided against going to Syracuse, but will stay in Lexington. May, C. Stetson and others are planning a meeting in Concord to deal with the case of Samuel Hoar. R. W. Emerson is said to be much stirred up by it. Yesterday's meeting was full and enthusiastic S. S. Foster wanted the governor of Massachusetts to send a military force to Charlesto[illegible].C. "to sustain our agent." This proposal was opposed [illegible] ground of Non-Resistance. Describes C. C. Burleigh's [illegible]d and hair. Mentions meeting R. Hildreth and being invited to meet his wife. Writer contracted a bad cold. Many people are named in this letter.

To Anne Warren Weston

[Darlington, England] The writer acknowledges two letters from the addressee. The first reached the writer at a time of "distressing anxiety" on account of the illness of her only brother, who is now recovering. The writer rejoices at the success of the Boston fair. Asks when the fair at Philadelphia will be held, as Sarah Pugh hinted that help from England would be acceptable. The account of the meeting in Faneuil Hall deeply interested the writer, who contrasts the persecution of Garrison in 1835 with the cheers he received at the recent meeting. The writer believes that the "infamous project in relation to Texa[illegible]s not likely to be carried into effect at present." Bla[illegible]the pro-slavery provisions of the U. S. Constitution and "Third Party" for supporting it.

«Bristol, England» The writer was much interested in the Anti-Slavery Fair. Thinks that letters should be published anonymously in the Abolition periodicals unless the author permits the use of his or her name. A handbill stating the the exact purposes of the Fair should be printed. Many English people don't know what the proceeds are used for. They also think that American slaves are very happy. The writer has been studying the history of the Mass. Anti-Slavery Soc'y. Discusses the case of Mr. Sargent and Mr. Parker. Says Miss Martineau's recovery has been aided by mesmerism, but regrets her attitude toward it. Her mental powers have been [illegible] impaired. A long discussion [illegible]smerism follows. Ends letter by asking a number of quest[illegible] on Anti-Slavery matters.

Is surprised that so many worthy and pious people are opposed to the Abolitionists. Suggests that it may be due to the violence of their language. The writer distributed Liberty Bells to various acquaintances. Tried to get her brother Russell to send his remarks on Jewish slaveholding to the addressee. .Port Républicain, Haiti. The writer speaks of the revolution of 1844 and the criticism of his country that it aroused Wants every planter desiring to free his slaves referred to him, and welcomes free negroes who want to settle in Haiti. Says that an A.S. society will be formed in Port Républicain whose objective will be a correspondence (application?) with the London society. Refers to newspaper articles about a negotiation between Doran, an English arbitrator and the Haitian cabinet.

:Concord, N.H.: Concerns the Herald of Freedom. "For my part I hate to touch it, or speak its stolen name." Refers to the "felonious sheet" and N.P. Rogers's expressed wish that others beside him would repel the attack on "Parkerism" and "our friend Tilden of the Unitarian Church." The writer maintains that "our paper appeared two days before his, with the entire sermon of Parker" and two articles, one by the writer, in defence of Tilden. "Rogers and his family continue to treat us with cold neglect...I have deprived my wife and daughter of many comforts on the Herald's account. I ever waived my claim on its behalf."

The writer, not being able to attend both the New England and the American Society's meetings, will go to New York. His parents will probably accept the addressee's invitation; the writer's wife will not attend either convention. The (addressee's) article for the writer's tract was not long enough, but he will fill space with his own gathering.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

«Dublin, Ireland» Thanks addressee for a gift of "American algae." Tells about the "great anti corn law affair" at which 50,000 pounds are expected to be realized. Comments on this year's Liberty Bell, especially on the contributions of Longfellow and Lizzie Poole; does not think that the portrait of Wendell Phillips does him justice. Asks why Mrs.Lydia Maria Child does not now write for the Liberty Bell or other A.S. publications; regrets not seeing her signature in the Standard or Liberator, "for she was a favourite writer." Asks about David Thomas, whether he is "mentally and morally in Collins's or any other co[illegible]ity." Comments on N.P. Rogers and the Herald of Fredom.

«Cincinnati, Ohio» Because of the high respect that the writer has for the addressee's opinions, she is consulting her in a private matter. About a month ago, the writer and her brother were appointed respectively instructress in needle work and professor of mathematics in Bellevue Female Seminary. The brother received, a week ago, a written notice that his services were no longer wanted, "his style of dress being unsuited to his position." The writer has resigned her position also, feeling sure that the matter of dress was merely a pretext and that he was being persecuted for his opinions. The seminary is frequented by pupils from the South.

«Groton, Mass.» The writer, at first in playful irony, and then seriously, criticizes the addressee's and the Massachusetts A.S. Society's views in respect to the annihilation of the United States Constitution and the effect of this move on the abolition of slavery. They think that when the Constitution is removed, slavery must fall. The writer thinks the reverse, and looks for "a change of action" as soon as those agreeing with the addressee will see their error. One officer in the society has already changed his views.

[(Natick,Mass.)] Suggests that the addressee's "representative pro temp last week" (on the Standard) made a mistake in publishing (Edward Strutt) Abdy's letter about (Henry) Colman. The writer, on reading "Europ[ean] Agricul[ture]" understood Colman to mean certain strictures "in sarcastic irony" and intended a remark in pity, not in contempt. Abdy, not knowing "the general lay of his mind," has misunderstood Colman. "Why not correct it now?" Henry Colman has rather "stood with us in the cause - than the other side." Comments on De Quincey's Suspiria de Profundis, now being published in Blackwood's magazine. The writer tells at length of his sister's correspondence with De Quincey's daughters in an attempt to find out some early family history, and of her being informed that Thomas De Quincey was the author of the Confessions, while Edmund De Quincey was a nom de guerre used by the author because, as a young man, he feared the book might impair his [illegible]ects. [Dublin, Ireland] Dublin seems to be in a profound calm; O'Connell is somewhere, but not yet acting vigorously. "Repeal" is very dear to the people's heart, but the writer thinks that "much of what they expect of it is perfectly Eutopian [sic]" Some counties present a serious exception to the general calm; gives instances of trouble. Reports on teetotalism in Ireland; "there are whole districts in which there is scarcely a pledge breaker known." Mentions the apathy of the middle and upper classes.
